the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are undernourished has increased from 600 million to 800 million.

There are a number of reasons for this. One is that the world's population has grown by 1.5 billion in the last 20 years. Another is that the world's population is becoming more urban. And a third is that the world's population is becoming more aged.

These three factors are all contributing to the increase in the number of people who are undernourished. And this is a serious problem, because undernourishment can lead to a number of health problems, including stunted growth and weakened immunity.

There are a number of ways to address this problem. One is to increase the production of food. Another is to improve the distribution of food. And a third is to improve the nutrition of the food that is produced.

These three strategies are all important, and they all need to be implemented in order to reduce the number of people who are undernourished. And this is a goal that we should all be striving for.

There are a number of organizations that are working to address this problem. One is the World Food Programme. Another is the United Nations Children's Fund. And a third is the International Fund for Agricultural Development.

These organizations are all working to improve the lives of people who are undernourished. And they are all making progress. But there is still a long way to go.

There are a number of things that we can do to help these organizations. One is to donate money. Another is to volunteer. And a third is to raise awareness of the problem.

These three things are all important, and they all need to be done in order to reduce the number of people who are undernourished. And this is a goal that we should all be striving for.
