401(k) Committee
I.C. Thomasson Associates, Inc. 401(k) Retirement Plan
Nashville, Tennessee

In planning and performing our audit of the financial statements of I.C. Thomasson Associates, Inc. 401(k) Retirement Plan (the Plan) for the period ended December 31, 2023, we considered relevant plan provisions and the Plan's internal control over financial reporting (internal control) as a basis for designing audit procedures that are appropriate in the circumstances for the purpose of expressing our opinion on the financial statements, but not for the purpose of expressing an opinion on the effectiveness of the Plan's internal control. Accordingly, we do not express an opinion on the effectiveness of the Plan's internal control.

Our consideration of relevant plan provisions and internal control was for the limited purpose described in the preceding paragraph and was not designed to identify all instances that the Plan is not operating in accordance with the Plan's provisions or deficiencies in internal control that might be material weaknesses or significant deficiencies. Therefore, instances that the Plan is not operating in accordance with plan provisions or deficiencies in internal control, including material weaknesses or significant deficiencies, may exist that were not identified.

A deficiency in internal control exists when the design or operation of a control does not allow management or employees, in the normal course of performing their assigned functions, to prevent, or detect and correct, misstatements on a timely basis. A deficiency in design exists when (a) a control necessary to meet the control objective is missing, or (b) an existing control is not properly designed so that, even if the control operates as designed, the control objective would not be met. A deficiency in operation exists when a properly designed control does not operate as designed or when the person performing the control does not possess the necessary authority or competence to perform the control effectively.

Instances where the Plan is not operating in accordance with plan provisions may be indicative of a deficiency in internal control. A deficiency in internal control exists when the design or operation of a control does not allow management or employees, in the normal course of performing their assigned functions, to prevent, or detect and correct, misstatements on a timely basis. A deficiency in design exists when (a) a control necessary to meet the control objective is missing, or (b) an existing control is not properly designed so that, even if the control operates as designed, the control objective would not be met. A deficiency in operation exists when a properly designed control does not operate as designed or when the person performing the control does not possess the necessary authority or competence to perform the control effectively.

A material weakness is a deficiency, or a combination of deficiencies, in internal control, such that there is a reasonable possibility that a material misstatement of the entity's financial statements will not be prevented, or detected and corrected, on a timely basis. We did not identify any deficiencies in internal control that constituted a material weakness.

A significant deficiency is a deficiency, or a combination of deficiencies, in internal control that is less severe than a material weakness, yet important enough to merit attention by those charged with governance. We did not identify any deficiencies in internal control that constituted a significant deficiency.

Following is a description of an identified deficiency in internal control that we determined did not constitute a significant deficiency or material weakness:

Improve Controls over Employee Deferral Calculations

During our audit, we noted several instances in which the employee bonus referrals were not excluded from eligible compensation and were included in deferral calculation in error. While the amounts involved were immaterial, we recommend that plan management review the payroll system to ensure pay codes are properly set-up in agreement with plan provisions.

Participant Election

During our audit, we noted an employee's Pre-tax election was set-up as a Roth election in error. The deferral was properly withheld at the correct rate throughout the year but was improperly categorized. This error was caught by the employer prior to year-end and was properly corrected and reported on the census. Additionally, the participants deferrals that were improperly categorized in Fidelity were corrected as well. We recommend that management review initial and change elections in payroll system to ensure the percentages and election type (i.e. Pre-tax or Roth) per Fidelity agree to the payroll system.
