To Whom it may concern,

I recently (November 2025) got a notice that I needed to file a Form 5500-SF for a 401K plan I had and closed out in 2023. I started the process to close out the plan in 2021. I spoke to the payroll company in 2023 and asked if I needed to file a form 5500 for that year and they stated that I should not have to. After trying for a year to get them to finalize closing the plan, I was happy to be done with it and took their word for it. That was my error and I apologize for not submitting the form anyway. There was so little in the plan to begin with and it basically had nothing in it by the time the company managed to close it out.

I am submitting it now, late. I understand there are possible penalties. I was wondering if there was a way that the penalties could be waived. I am diligent in submitting forms and making payments on time. I was just not given the right information. With a busy business, my husband out of work and the birth of a baby added into the mix that year, I failed to follow up.

Thank you for your time and considering to waive the fees associated with a late filing,
